

Podcast Gumbo Transcription Comparison

Below are two transcriptions for my March 18th Awkward Moments Day episode.

Yellow highlights: minor issues. Not surprised.

Orange highlights: More than minor but not horrible

Descript.com

Hey, this is Paul condo. This is the podcast gumbo podcast, and I've got a rhetorical question for you. Are you like me? And find those things we call national days like cheeseball day or worse, moldy cheese day. Amusing. Yeah, me too. So each week I'll have one of my podcast friends challenged me to find an episode related to one of those days, and I'll be releasing it on the actual day it occurs.

So let's get to it. What is today's national day?

Hey folks, this is Mark pagan, and the holiday I'm picking is national awkward moments day. On March 18th. I mean really, who needs March 18th when so many of us live this day so much of the rest of the calendar year, but thankfully they gave us one day in which we can all get together and be awkwardly silent, or I don't know what else. See, even right now, I'm being awkward. All right. That's my holiday. I'm sticking to it.

As Mark awkwardly said, today is March 18th and this national awkward moments day. Someone really needs to get that man some help. Of course, when you get him some help, get me some as well. I'm no different than anybody else in this world that hasn't been mortified about something they've done many times over.

So today, think about that time when you ask someone when she was due and she wasn't pregnant and tried to laugh it off. True story. I was at a party and I was in a conversation where that happened. I wasn't the one that said it, and luckily the woman elegantly brushed it off, but since that day, I don't ever ask someone if they're pregnant until I see their kid on the playground.

Have a hearty laugh today by sharing your stories, using the awkward moments day hashtag

there's a good chance that you had a lot of awkward moments when you were a kid. Some people relive them by digging up their old diaries. Inexplicably. Some people read those diaries in front of a large audience. Well, that's the premise of the mortified podcast, and then the love hurts episode. You get to hear two young love stories that indeed hurt this week.

Suggestion comes from my friend Mark Paragon. The host of the other men need help podcast. Mark's podcast. I sex the way other men avoid accountability, cling to power, mask insecurities, and quietly screamed for connection. In the episode entitled, she makes more. Mark talks to a few other men about their feelings, who's partners make more money than they do. But as it turns out, is not just other men.

For closing recommendation, Mark recommends the Latino USA podcast episode on Orlando, El Gato Melendez, a performer on the Harlem globe Trotters, which Mark says he's listened to multiple times as it gives him such optimism.

No extra hot sauce today except to say that I was once daydreaming and a girl yelled at me for staring at her. That happened in the eighth grade and I'm still not over it. Come back on March 25th to appreciate everyone's favorite herbivore. The Manatee.

As always, take a look at the show notes for links to all the podcasts mentioned in this episode, as well as other life altering information to make it easy for you. There's also a link to a podcast playlist that will contain all the episodes ever mentioned in the show. See you next week sometime for another round of recommendation.

Are you still listening? You still want more podcasts? Goodness. If so, get on over to podcast, gumbo.com and subscribe to my newsletter today.

Otter.ai

Hey, this is Paul condo. This is the podcast gumbo podcast and I've got a rhetorical question for you. Are you like me and find those things we call national days like cheese ball day or worse. Moldy Cheese Day amusing. Yeah, me too. So each week I'll have one of my podcast friends challenged me to find an episode related to one of those days, and I'll be releasing it on the actual day occurs.

So let's get to it. What is today's National Day?

Hey, folks, this is Mark Bergen and the holiday I'm picking is National awkward moments day on March 18. I mean, really, who needs March 18 when so many of us live this day, so much of the rest of the calendar year. But thankfully they gave us one day in which we can all get together and Be awkwardly silent, or I don't know what else see even right now and being awkward. Alright, that's my holiday. I'm sticking to it.

As Mark awkwardly said, Today is March 18. And it's national awkward moments day. Someone really needs to get that man some help. Of course, when you get them some help get me some as well. I'm no different than anybody else in this world that hasn't been mortified about something they've done many times over.

So today, think about that time when you ask someone when she was due, and she wasn't pregnant, and try to laugh it off. True story. I was at a party and I was in a conversation where that happened. I wasn't the one that said it. And luckily the woman elegantly brushed it off, but since that day, I don't ever ask someone if they're pregnant until I see their kid on the playground.

Have a hearty laugh today by sharing your stories using the awkward moments day hashtag

There's a good chance that you had a lot of awkward moments when you were a kid. Some people relive them by digging up their old diaries. inexplicably, some people read those diaries in front of a large audience. Well, that's the premise of the mortified podcast. And then the Love Hurts episode, you get to hear two young love stories that indeed hurt.

This week's suggestion comes from my friend Mark buck on the host of the other men need help podcast, Mark's podcast I sex the way other men avoid accountability, cling to power, mask insecurities, and quietly screen for connection. In the episode entitled she makes more, Mark talks to a few other men about their feelings whose partners make more money than they do. But as it turns out, it's not just other men.

For closing recommendation, Mark recommends the Latino USA podcast episode on Orlando Elgato Melendez, a performer on the Harlem Globetrotters, which Mark says he's listened to multiple times as it gives him such optimism.

No extra hot sauce today, except to say that I was once daydreaming, and a girl yelled at me for staring at her. That happened in the eighth grade and I'm still not over it. Come back on March 25 to appreciate everyone's favorite herbivore, the manatee.

As always, take a look at the show notes for links to all the podcasts mentioned in this episode, as well as other life altering information. To make it easy for you, there's also a link to a podcast playlist that will contain all the episodes ever mentioned in the show. See you next week, some time for another round of recommendations.

Are you still listening? Do you still want more podcasts goodness? If so, get on over to podcast gumbo calm and subscribe to my newsletter today.